England saw the mighty sprint of the little Salt Lake fire own domains could produce. England saw the mighty sprint landed in the world's championship race and brought home to Utah its only world's championship race and brought home to Utah its only world's championship title in a sporting event. For years Salt Lake gycle fans have seen the speed-increasing wonder win his races with a dash and vim that have made then stand on their feet and cheer to the echo. Iver Lawson has won many a great battle on the cycle track, but last night was the crowding effort in a long list of great struggles.

The old historic saucer, now the acknowledged cycle-racing center of the universe, has seen some great races. The condition of the pacing work, started after Lawson and they condition the pacing work, started after Lawson and they for the pacing work, started after Lawson and they have been and hold the pace, but it was too fast the salt of the pacing work started to pack the pacing work started to pack the pacing work, started to the pacing work started to pack the pa

It was in the three-mile handicap Jap race that Lawson spread-eagled the field and put a burst of speed in a bicycle that these who have followed the game for years would not have believed possible. But the program had another feature last evening. This was not a bicycle race, but Held's band. John gave orders for the hornexperts to play "In My Merry Oldsmobile." It made a hit, and in a few seconds 3,000 lips broke into the chorand a half from home timed Hopper's pace to the tape and himself unwound his greatest sprint and finished three lengths ahead of the Minneapolis flyer. With him came Floyd McFarland a wheel behind, not paced by Lawson, but using ways from Sunday.

As the riders lined up for the memo-cable race—a race which will long be remembered in Utah's cycle-racing cir-cles—one could see that there would have to be some great work done by the back men to hear to get include it would be samester. to be some great work done by the back men to hope to get inside of the money. As is usual in such events, the race developed into two bunches, the middle-mark men and the scratch men, half a lap apart, each combination forgetting their personal grudges in their combined efforts, the back men to catch the leaders and the leaders to keep away. In the back bunch were Lawson, Samuelson, McFarland, Folger and Downing, while a dozen of the other sprinters made to the leaders.

They at once settled down to scientific work, each bunch to accomplish its purposes. Lap by lap they changed pace—a pace which was terrific and ended the tace away under the world's record time. Every man strained every nerve—all but Samuelson, The pride of Departs 20.

Every man strained every nerve—all but Samuelson. The pride of Provo "dogged."
In the two miles and over traveled to catch the leaders Samuelson took but one lap and this time saved himself and did not gain an inch on the leaders. After this Samuelson dropped back each time pace was changed, and never again showed up to his share of the work he should do from a spirit of fairness, or required of him by the racing rule of the N.
